Summer Newsletter 2014

'... thank you for the help with my recent public speaking foray ... I don't think the speech could have gone better ...'

Joanne Edwards

Chair of Resolution, the national family lawyers association

Hoping you're enjoying a successful and productive summer. It's been an eventful few months for me and Speaking Well In Public – here are just a few of the highlights:

Corporate learning and development:

For the last few months I've been directing the project to deliver the Pensions Regulator's new blended learning programme on the 2013 Public Service Pensions Act code of practice. When the training goes live on their website in October 2014, new pension board members will find all they need to guide them in the good governance of public service pensions, including a comprehensive E-Learning programme and other online resources.

Talking speaking:

Remember the BBC's Jamaica Inn mumbling controversy this spring? So was it down to poor sound recording, or was it a matter of the director and actors' artistic choices outweighing our need to hear the dialogue? I was interviewed on BBC Radio Five Live together with a sound expert, and you can hear our conversation about the issue here: <http://www.speakingwellinpublic.co.uk/contents/media/>

Public speaking skills training for business:

Blue Edge Bid Services – I worked with this Brighton company specialising in supporting their clients to win business bids

BAM Nuttall – my Pitching and Presentations master-class prepared the company that build the London 2012 Olympic Stadium for a major business event

Pallant House Gallery, Chichester – I delivered my Confident Public Speaking Skills for business workshop for their staff

1-1 coaching:

I prepared the new chair of Resolution to deliver her inaugural speech to the 300 members of this national family lawyers' association [see her response above]

Career coaching sessions for a group of professionals unexpectedly faced with the prospect of redundancy, exploring preparing for presentations and interviews, writing CVs and developing Linked In presence

Interview skills for a scientist facing his first interview in many years

Linked In presence coaching for a designer/musician currently developing a charming new children's TV series

Pro bono / community events:

I donated two 1-1 coaching sessions in Confident Public Speaking and Leadership for the Blind Veterans UK fund-raising team

Other news:

You can read some of my latest business articles at my Linked In profile:

As an actor, I'm working on a film version of my solo play, 'Turning the Handle'

My new book, 'Talking Speaking', will be available through the website soon

My new CD, 'Reading to Children,' will be available through the website soon

My courses for business:

Confident Public Speaking – a one day course for beginners, the nervous and those looking to refresh their skills

Practical Public Speaking – a one day course for improvers and those seeking further practical presentation experience with feedback

Bespoke corporate training events in Public Speaking, Leadership, Personal Branding and Next Career Steps – choose from my extensive menu of options, or design a corporate course to meet your needs

1-1 coaching:

Public Speaking, Leadership, Personal Branding and Next Career Steps – design a personal two hour coaching session to meet your needs
